FILING RETURNS

A return is a declaration of income a taxpayer periodically makes to URA indicating how the taxpayer has transacted during that period and any tax payable for that period. This is done through self-assessment.

What are the types of returns?

Broadly there are two categories of returns

a) Provisional tax return

This is a declaration made by the taxpayer to URA showing estimated annual income and corresponding tax payable for that year of income (return for the next period)

b) Final Returns:

This is a declaration made by the taxpayer to URA showing actual annual income including actual tax payable by the taxpayer for that year of income (return for the past period)

Note: Returns are filed either weekly, monthly or yearly depending on the tax type you are registered for.

How can I file my tax returns?

You can file your tax return by visiting the URA portal, log in to your account. Some returns such as VAT return are prefilled, others are filled through the webpages while such require you to download them. In case of failure to file returns, kindly contact us through our service support channels.

- Returns are supposed to be filed by the due date. A due date is the deadline for filing returns or making the payment for tax
- Filing of a return must be followed up with payment of the tax payable
- Late filing of a return leads to penalties
- If you are not able to file a return by the due date, you can apply for an extension to file your return providing reasons justifying the extension. The extension if granted will not exceed 90 days (in aggregate) and does not change the due date for payment of the tax due. Interest will, therefore, accrue on any outstanding tax liability.

PAYMENT OF TAX

You are expected to pay the correct tax to URA. The due date for filing returns is the same as the date for payment.

When am I expected to pay for the tax due?

You are required to pay tax due by the deadline as indicated in the table above. Late payment of tax attracts interest at a rate of 2% per month the tax is not paid.

What are the modes of payment?

Payment for any tax type can be done using; bank, URA USSD code *285#, VISA card, MasterCard, American Express, Union Pay, Mobile Money, EFT, RTGS and Swift, Cash, Cheque, Demand draft and Point of Sale.

Can I pay my taxes in installments?

Yes, you can pay your taxes in installments. This however, requires that you apply for permission to do this. In case you require this service, please contact the nearest URA office.

TAX ASSESSMENTS

How am I assessed for tax?

Tax assessments arise when you fail to file returns. These are estimates of taxes due. Assessments are of several types namely,

SN	Type of Assessment	Details
1.	Estimated/ Default assessment	URA may assess you where you fail to file a self-assessment return. This happens in case of assessed losses, excess input tax credit (VAT) or if there is any tax payable. URA does so using available information.
2.	Advance assessment	URA may assess you where there is a risk that you may delay, obstruct, prevent or render ineffective payment, or collection of tax that has not yet become due.
3.	Additional assessment	URA may make an assessment amending a tax assessment for a tax period. It may be made • At any time if fraud or any gross or willful neglect has been committed by or on your behalf • If new information has been discovered in relation to tax payable for a tax period

Can I object to tax assessed?

If you have been assessed and are dissatisfied with the assessment, it is your right to object to the decision.

Can a TIN be de-activated?

Yes. A TIN can be deactivated in case;

- You temporarily close business with the intention of resuming, you can deactivate your TIN and later on reactivate it when the business resumes.
- The commissioner is convinced that a taxpayer no longer satisfies the registration conditions, the Commissioner can initiate the deregistration process.
